Fall 2017
T 4:30-7:10pm
CRN 69845

This seminar is an advanced survey of feminist accounts of the relation between the subordination of women and heterosexuality and feminist sexual ethics. We will critically evaluate formative concepts and debates in feminist thought regarding heterosexism, gendered eroticism, sexual objectification and harassment, pornography, and the existential and political significance of sexual agency.

This course will help graduate students develop competency in feminist theory.
