How are gender identities and gender roles normalized through education?

What barriers do students face when attempting to receive an education?

What are the long-term impacts of discrimination in education?

This course examines gender issues within the context and concerns of K-12 schooling as well as higher education within the United States. The readings and discussion will be designed to examine ideas about race, class, sexuality, and other aspects of identity in addition to gender. We will focus on the following themes: the history of gender discrimination within educational institutions; heterosexist, homophobic, and transphobic forms of bullying and violence; and the influences of gendered practices on students, teachers, classrooms, schools, and educational policy.
